President Wilson is making a close study of the probable cost of strengthening the army and navy.

Do not burn your leaves as it is very unhealthy and besides you need them in your garden as they are valuable manure.

With a clear conscience you can look any man in the eye and tell him to go to Lancaster, which is the best place to go to the globe.

There are two ways of getting into a newspaper--purchasing an interest and purchasing an interview. There is still another way--pulling the wool over the editor's eyes and getting in for nothing. This is a very popular form of entry.

Whenever you hear a man glorifying the past and deriding of the good old days, you may be sure that man's physical and intellectual powers are waning, and that he is straggling farther and farther behind in the rush of the world's progress. The best thing about the good old days is that they have not a return ticket.

The scarcest things on earth today are men. There are lots of "average men," and a few men of "more than ordinary ability," but when it comes to real men--men of character, men of force, men whose names are things to conjure with, men whose time is worth a thousand dollars a week because people trust them--they are few and far between.

ADDRESS TO MASON.

Dr. A. H. Hibshman will give a special talk to Masons at the Presbyterian church to-night. All members are asked to meet at Lodge room promptly at seven o'clock.

ADVISE SCHOOL LIBRARIES.

The State Department of Education is sending out to teachers a bulletin advising them to acquire school libraries and giving a list and advice about the selection and installation of the libraries.

BUYS REGISTERED SOW.

While at the State Fair in Louisville last week Mr. W. S. Embry tells us that he purchased a fine Poland China sow, that is bred in the purple and is a fine individual. This sow cost Mr. Embry $65 and he says he got a bargain.

GOOD SHEEP SALE.

Mr. R. E. Henry recently sold to Washington county parties a bunch of 450 sheep that he had just gotten from Arkansas, for $25. a head. Mr. Henry has several car loads more on the road and from the quality of the sheep he should find little difficulty in disposing of them.

KENTUCKY PRESS MEETING.

The executive committee of the Kentucky Press Association met at Louisville last Friday and selected December 27-28 as the next date for their mid-winter meeting, which is to be held at Lexington. This committee will meet again in Louisville at the Seelbach, to arrange the entire program.

SELLS TROTTING HORSE.

Mr. Forrest Stapp sold his trotting horse, Honolulu, to Mr. L. S. Hadley, of Wilson N. C., for $850. This was considered one of the best horses Mr. Stapp has ever owned, royally bred and could show a mile in 2:12, although he held no record. Mr. Hadley will race this horse through the North Carolina circuit.

IN AGAIN, OUT AGAIN.

Mr. John Magee, former resident and business man of the city was in our city last week and opened up a new stock of goods furnishings next to the Record office. Mr. Magee was only here three days however before he sold the entire stock to Mr. S. N. Davis, our local merchant.

We were sorry to lose Mr. Magee so soon, but glad he succeeded in disposing of his stock, although he sold it at a sacrifice to Mr. Davis who is now retailing it to his customers at great bargains.

SMALL CROWD

And Bidding Slow At Hubble Sale.

The Jack and Jennet sale of L. G. Hubble, which took place yesterday near Hubble, was very poorly attended and the stock sold exceeding low. About twenty jennets of different ages were sold at an average of about $90, some selling as low as $15. Only a few young jacks were sold, all young ones and for practically nothing. Two aged jacks were taken down with no bid offered.

SQUIRE J. P. BOURNE

Buying Mule Colts.

Squire Jim Bourne informs the Record that he will be in Lancaster County Court Day for the purpose of buying from twenty to twenty-five mule colts. There has been little market for mule colts in this County up to this date, but those who have mule colts they desire to dispose of could probably find a sale for them in Lancaster County Court Day, it being very likely there will be other buyers here also.

LARGE CROWDS

Attend Protracted Meeting.

The meeting that began at the Presbyterian church ten days ago is still in progress and large crowds are in attendance every afternoon and evening.

Dr. Hibshman spoke to the Odd Fellows last night his subject being "The Good Samaritan". To-night his address will be of a Masonic nature, his theme being, "The Stone Which Builder Rejected Has Become the Head of The Corner." The meeting will continue throughout the week and will close as has been announced next Sunday night. His sermons every Sunday afternoon to men only, have been exceptionally good and he has been greeted with good audiences at these services.

BABIES HEALTH CONTEST

At State Fair.

With blue ribbons pinned to each shoulder of their little white frocks, and a fakie bank account snugly tucked away in the pockets of the fond papas and mammas, the two grand prize winners of the babies' health contest at the State Fair were borne in triumph from the big pavilion, where the prizes were awarded Friday afternoon.

Helen LaVerne Swasey, of Jefferson, and William Mackin, of 1218 South Sixth street, are the names of the children who win the $50 prizes for the highest score made by boy and girl babies, the little girl scoring 94.4 the boy 93.5.

The first prize winner in the class, 12 to 24 months, was Wm. A. Elkin, son of Lee Elkin and grandson of Armp Elkin, both of whom were born in Lancaster, so he is a Garrard Co. product after all.

TWO ROADS IN COUNTY

Being Constructed Under State Aid.

Over two miles of state aid road has been built in the county, one mile on the Stanford pike and about one mile on the Lexington road and all who have seen these roads, pronounce them the best they have ever seen. Three miles of this road is being constructed by the county under the supervision of the state agent, while fourteen miles has been let by contract to Hughes Brothers and Ward, for $1.45 a cubit yard. The estimated cost of these two roads is about $1,000 a mile, the aid the county receives from the state, paying for one half of it, reduces the cost very materially. It is thought by many if these roads are now given a good coat of oil, they will last for fifteen years without any further work than to keep the ditches open. The metal for the Stanford road is being shipped from Mt Vernon and about twenty car loads a week are being delivered.

POWER FROM DANVILLE

Is Latest Move For Municipal Ownership.

Dr. Fayette Dunlap and Messrs. Irvine and Lips of Danville met by invitation, a special meeting of the city council last Monday night, at which time the advisability of getting electricity from The Danville Light and Power Company was discussed. The plan suggested is a very plausible one, while nothing definite has been proposed as to the price, it is believed by those who know, that it will be much cheaper than it can be produced here. These gentlemen representing the Danville power plant, have promised to make a proposition to the council the next meeting night, which will be the first Monday night in October. Cities very much larger than Lancaster are getting there "juice" from other cities; Paris being one that gets her service from Lexington, we are told, for less than two cents a kilowatt. It is thought that Lancaster by building the line to Danville, can get this "juice" for about two cents. This will give us a twenty-four hour service at a much less cost than we are now getting for an eight hour service. The city should own and control her light plant and this looks like a good proposition on the face of it.

VOTE FOR TOM BALLARD.

For Sheriff

To the voters of Garrard County: It is generally known that the late C. A. Robinson was elected sheriff of Garrard county by one of the largest majorities ever given any man, and that George T. Ballard Jr., was his chief deputy, George T. Ballard Sr., his father, being a partner with Mr. Robinson in the emoluments or fees of the office. If Mr. Ballard is elected for the two years, yet remaining of the term, he is pledged, and justly so, to give the widow of Mr. Robinson half the profits or fees of the office, which are certainly belong to her as any property he left her. The truth is, an office in a most sacred property right, being bestowed by the people, the highest authority, and it would be the greatest injustice to deprive the holders of such property of their rights. It is not believed that the voters of Garrard county will overlook the principles of justice and equity in this race. If the office belonged to Robinson and Ballard before Mr. Robinson's death, the remainder of the term belongs to Ballard and Mr. Robinson's widow.

If the voters will calmly consider this, as a matter of right and justice, they will not recall or revoke what they have done, and Tom Ballard will be elected by an overwhelming majority.

WHAT THE DOG TAX DOES.

The dog tax, after paying for the sheep killed, will contribute $9,622.46 toward the education of the 743,501 school children in Kentucky this year. While it will go back to the counties from which it originated, and while some counties exhausted the fund paying for dog-killed sheep, which makes the distribution unequal, the dog will have contributed a proportionate share of the State school fund amounting to over 18 cents for each child.

LEXINGTON TROTS.

The Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association at Lexington, owners of the most perfectly appointed trotting course in the world, the fastest track, offers the largest purses, schedules the most important events and attracts thousands of visitors from all over the United States. It has done more to promote the breeding industry than any trotting association in the country. It has helped make Kentucky the greatest nursery for the trotter of any state in the union. The October Meeting will be held the 4th to 16th inclusive and excursion rates are given on all railroads.

ROAD BONDS DEFEATED.

ED IN LINCOLN.

By a majority of only 30 a proposal to vote $130,000 in road bonds was defeated in Lincoln county Saturday and only 1,600 votes were cast out of about 4,000 in the county.

ROAD BUILDING

IN KENTUCKY.

Sixty roads, totaling about 420 miles in length, are now under construction with state aid, and fifty-five inspectors, are engaged in supervising the work. Plans for about 800 miles of road work all told have been submitted to the State Road Department. County Judge Asher, of Bell, has broken the precedent in the State by going outside his county for an engineer, and has employed a man who has been engaged in building roads in Wise county, Virginia which voted a large bond issue.

GERMANS HAVE LOST TWENTY SUBMARINES.

The Germans have lost twenty submarines since the beginning of the war, according to an editorial note in the Motor Ships and Motor Boats, while the British losses have been only seven, including the E-7, the destruction of which was announced yesterday. When the war commenced, the paper declares, Germany had eleven sea going submarines and sixteen of the smaller type, while up to June ten new boats had been added. The assertion is made that the Germans now have only fourteen sea going underwater boats, two of which are in the Mediterranean.

TENNESSEE OFFICIAL WINS LONG FIGHT

J. W. Seaton of Linden, Clerk of the Circuit Court of the Twelfth Judicial District of Tennessee, was for years a sufferer from stomach troubles—in part a result of his confusing work. He tried doctor after doctor. He tried medicines without end.

One day he took a dose of May's Wonderful Remedy. He wrote:

"Your medicine is the best in the world for any form of stomach trouble. I am glad to say that after taking the full treatment I feel that I am well."

"I had very severe pains in my stomach for some time. One bottle of your medicine did me ten times as much good as all the doctors' medicine that I took for two years. My family physician told me that I would never be any better—today I am well. I have gained twenty-five pounds."

May's Wonderful Remedy gives permanent results for stomach, liver and intestinal ailments. Eat as much as you like. No more distress after eating, pressure of gas in the stomach and around the heart. Get one bottle of your druggist now and try it on an absolute guarantee—if not satisfactory money will be returned.

HYMN TO THE REPUBLIC

(By Grosvenor Clarkson.)

"I turn, then, and look to the American people, and to that God who has never forsaken them,"—Abraham Lincoln, 1862.

Need not the little mounting talk of little men,

Weight long the faintest whisper of Almighty God;

Peer far into the vistas of the common ken,

Seek cut the vision of the genius and the clod;

Brood deep, O thou my country, silent to the gales

That roar their pregnant furies 'round thy noble dreams,

Sons of the North, hold firm the scales!

Across the cryptic seas beneath red reeling skies,

Old lands in travail call the unawakened queen

Or all the western world to sweep with them where dies

Or live their hope, which sentiment right alone keeps green;

Where battle-gods that foolish men thought dead swing thalls

Of wrath and lust from sun to sun,

From star to star,

Sons of the East, hold firm the scales!

Brood deep, O thou my country! Choose ye the peace

That many—who knows?—corrode thy mighty frame,

Or do ye cast thy all into a timeless lease

With fate? Only thy conscience can forestall thy shame,

With one go fruitful ease and lack of women's wails,

But where the bugles blow fame marries none but death.

Sons of the South, hold firm the scales!

Think well, and if at last ye shall unloose the sword,

She singing of an hundred million throats shall swear

It holds no stain and is the consecrated word

Of purpose and of power, a flame to bear—

Immortal until time has closed its epileptics—

Before the sacred altars of a nation's soul,

Sons of the West, hold firm the scales!

A WORD TO FARMERS.

Last Saturday a farmer came in this office and we were discussing the importance of selecting and caring for seed corn. He said he lost at least $200 by not selecting and caring for his seed corn and other seeds last year.

Take warning my farmer friend, and select your seed corn this fall while you have plenty of time. Do it while you are passing through the field admiring your crop. Remember if you have a good strain of corn it doesn't pay to buy from someone else. Follow the following rules and select yourself corn this fall.

Rules for selecting seed corn:

1. Secure from hills with two or more stalks.
2. Secure from stalks bearing two or more ears.
3. Secure ears at proper height from the ground.
4. Secure shanks of medium length with ears hanging down.
5. Spread out the need in a dry, warm place.
6. Select ears well rounded over at tip ends.
7. Select ears large around.
8. Select ears with small cob and large kernels.
9. Select ears with wedge-shaped grains.
10. Select ears with grains in straight rows.
11. Select ears with grains rather smooth-dented.
12. Select ears with grains plump and firm on cob.

You can readily see that it would be impossible to avail yourself of the first four rules unless you select your seed from standing corn. It may be well to point out a few of these four rules:

In the first place, an ear that has grown in a hill of two or more stalks that grew by itself is naturally a more vigorous one and should make better seed, other things being equal. Again if you take your seed from stalks of two ears on them even if not quite so large as where only one ear grew on a stalk, you can in a few years develop a strain and is equally as good as another of corn that will almost invariably produce two ears to the stalk. Therefore select best ears from stalks with two or more ears.

Then it is of advantage to have ears from three and a half feet to live from the ground, not only because it is easier to handle, in cutting, stripping, and toppling, but also your corn will ripen more uniformly and all be ready to harvest at nearly the same time.

Lastly it is a waste as well as an inconvenience to have ears with blancks a foot long. And again if shank is short and stiff, holding the ear in an upright position it allows rain water to run in and injure the grain. Whereas, if the shank is moderately long and limber enough to allow the ear to hang top downward, the husk drains the rain and dew off all, and the ears keep perfectly dry even if left out all winter in the field.

Everyone should know that freezing injures seed corn if it is not thoroughly cured and dry. Even then it does no good. So be on the safe side and store your seed corn in a warm, dry place such as around the chimney upstairs in the house.

"I was annoyed for over a year by attacks of acute indigestion," writes Mrs. M. J. Gallagher, Geneva, N. Y. "I tried everything that was recommended to me for this complaint, but nothing did me much good until about four months ago I saw Chamberlain's Tablets advertised and procured a bottle of them from our druggist. I soon realized that I had gotten the right thing for they helped me at once. Since taking two bottles of them I can eat heartily without any bad effects." Sold by all dealers.

COTTON GOING UP.

Granting that the markets of Germany and Austria are closed to American cotton all estimates agree that the present crop will fall short of the demands of the open markets. But it is very doubtful if it will be possible to cut Germany entirely off. Last year she was supposed to not get any cotton but when the returns were all in it was found that she had imported more cotton than in any former year. England is no more able to control the sea now than a year ago. We can therefore expect buyers for Germany to be in the market for cotton. If they purchased as much as was used by Germany last year the world supply will fall about 2,500,000 bales short of the demand. That means that there is to be a scramble for cotton, with an ever rising price and the men who own a few bales of cotton a few months hence will get a good stiff price for it; probably the highest in recent years.

IT IS LITTLE USE.

It is little use for the local editor to waste his lungs and sprain his spine in trying to boom a town when the citizens all stand around with their hands in their pockets and indifferently wait for something to turn up. If the capitalists or business men do not put their shoulders to the wheel and do a little boasting it is useless for the editor to try and boom things. He can write "boom" articles till he gets bald headed, but if the citizens themselves do not take hold and push, the town will forever stick in the mud. Of what use is it for the local paper to suggest improvements and new enterprises if the suggestions are never acted upon? One man cannot boom a town. It requires the concerted action of the citizens. When one man shoulders a town and attempts to carry it there are always a lot of cranky kickers ready to jump on top of the load. Unity of action is what knocks.

My wife felt weak and was easily tired and was also troubled with various pains, but since she took Peru-na she is well and strong."

SYSTEM SCORES.

Suggestions About Planning Work to Avoid Drudgery.

CERTAIN HOUSEHOLD TRICKS.

The Principles "Don't Dawdle" and "Let Your Head Save Your Heels" Applied to Housework Establishes Routine Without Lessening Comfort.

How best to arrange one's work that the minimum of time and strength may produce the maximum of comfort is a problem solvable only by system. All work becomes much easier if it follows a routine enabling one to turn from duty to duty without stopping to think what comes next or how to do it. The two rules of the old New England housekeeper who thought of little else but housekeeping are as good today as they were fifty years ago—"Don't dawdle," "Let your head save your heels."

Certain tasks must be done every day. Menus must be prepared, dishes washed, dusting done, beds made, and so on. By going about these always in the same order they will soon be dispatched, and then there is time for the special task assigned to that day. Breakfast should be a simple meal, and any housekeeper with a gas stove should have it ready in half an hour; with other fuel more time must be given.

Each member of the family leaves doors ajar when he or she goes to breakfast. When the meal is eaten set away, dishes are piled for washing, set into the pan with hot water over them to wait until front of house is in order.

Dusty sofa pillows are shaken, polished floors dusted with a dry mop, carpet sweeper run over rugs, finger marks wiped from doors and the furniture and floor boards wiped superficially. The thorough cleaning comes on its appointed day. Less than ten minutes given regularly to a room will make many a mother sleeping. He makes the weekly hand out to the butcher, the milkman and the baker, and his little pile is badly demolished before he has been home an hour.

If there is a noise in the night, Dad is kicked in the back and made to go downstairs and find the burglar and kill him. Mother darns the socks, but Dad bought the socks in the first place, and the needles and the yarn afterwards. Mother does up the fruit; Dad bought it all, and jars and sugar cost like the mischief.

Dad buys the chicken for Sunday dinners, serves them himself, and draws the neck from the ruins after everybody else is served. "What is Home Without a Father?" Ten chances to one it is a boarding house; father is under a slab, and the landlady is the widow. Dad, here's to you! You've got your faults, you may have lots of them, but you are all right and we will miss you when you are gone.

There is an old prejudice in favor of Monday as wash day, but the housekeeper who will devote Monday to cleaning up the extra confusion from Sunday, when every one is at home, will find herself in better trim at the end of the week.

As she goes through the rooms she collects articles for the wash, taking out stains, taking the starch or two that will be ten if left untaken. Then she sorts the clothes for the wash and puts them to soak, the very soiled by themselves.

Tuesday she draws the dirty water from the tubs full of oil and replaces it with clean, soapy, hot water. Generally she rises a little earlier to get things well started. She hangs her clothes to dry smoothly and puts things of the same kind together. She folds them as she takes them from the line. Wednesday she irons, and as she does she puts on the same rod of the clothes horse all the things that need a stich; she sorts as she irons.

Thursday is reserved for any odd jobs about the house like cleaning silver, mirrors, glasses, windows, flushing the left over iring, if any, taking the stitches needed for hosiery or other things and putting away the clothes from the laundry. Friday is a genuine cleaning day.

Saturday is a day of preparation for the Sunday, which in many families is the hardest day of the week. The wise housekeeper plans for her rest on that day. She prepares her soup, roast, dessert, on Saturday; the vegetable in a salad or something quickly cooked; the roast may be finished on Sunday, but should be partly cooked the day before.

With her Sunday rest and change of thought the housekeeper can begin her week serene and happy.

KENTUCKY STATE FAIR.

The Kentucky State Fair opened its gates on Monday morning to a record-breaking attendance who were entertained by various amusements, and by one of the best shows of live stock which were ever held on the State Fair grounds.

The display of live stock in every department, from the enormous, broad-backed Herefords to the rare species of little game and fish, were featured by large shows and attracted thousands of the State Fair visitors throughout the day.

The horse show, as usual, was the center of attraction in the live stock pavilion throughout the afternoon and night programme, and the popularity of the equine beasts was evidenced by the large and enthusiastic crowd of spectators who constantly kept the pavilion in an uproar with their enthusiasm.

The Woman's department was unusually full, owing to the untiring efforts of Mrs. Harry McCarty of Nicholasville; There were six thousand entries and when it is stated no article was lost or misplaced, shows Mrs. McCarty not only untiring but efficient and painstaking.

NOTED WOMAN SPEAKER
Mrs. James A. Leech will speak at the school auditorium, Saturday, October 2nd, at two thirty o'clock. She comes under the auspices of the Kentucky Illiteracy Commission, being one of the one hundred and twenty speakers sent out by them. We ask the Woman Club to cooperate with the county illiteracy commission in advertising this speaker and date, and helping in every way to aid the cause.

"No illiteracy in Kentucky in 1920" is the slogan of the illiteracy commission. Surely, the woman throughout the country will help to bring this dream true.

Gov. McCrory has issued a proclamation asking that all schools close on the date of these speakers in order that teachers and pupils may attend. We therefore ask pupils, teachers, club women, trustees and all interested to hear Mrs. Leech the 29th.

GLAD SHE TOOK
FRIENDS' ADVICE
Mrs. Catherine Meyer Finds Relief From Debility in Tanlac.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 23, 1915. Many women suffer from sluggishness and depression without being able to find relief from a condition which they know to be unnatural. One of them who did find relief is Mrs. Catherine Meyer, of 1915 High street, this city. She said recently that she had recovered from a condition of nervous debility through the use of Tanlac, the peerless preparation.

"I was run-down and felt tired if I made the least exertion," she said. "I was melancholy and nervous. Any unusual noise startled me. My digestion was poor, and I couldn't sleep well."

Finally I became interested in Tanlac and sent to the drug store for a bottle of it. As soon as I began taking it I got better. Now I sleep soundly, and have recovered from my nervousness and depression."

Mrs. Meyer's experience is not unusual. Women often suffer from a tired, sluggish feeling without knowing the why of it. They are often subject, too, to depression and melancholy. Where Mrs. Meyer found relief, others may. She is one of hundreds who have given voluntary testimony to the value of Tanlac.

Tanlac can now be had in Lancaster at the R. E. McRoberts drug store and in Bryantsville at Backer, Ballard & Scott.

CONDENSED NEWS
From Seat Of War.

Letters taken from James Archibald, the American correspondent, were made public Tuesday in London. Among the letters was one in which Dumba referred to Lansing's "weak arguments" in reply to the Austrian note and to the "self-willed" President of the United States. A letter from Von Bernstorff to Archibald thanked the American for the service he had already rendered to the cause of Germany. Von Papen in a letter speaks of "idiotic Yankees."

Field Marshall von Hindenburg's efforts to surround the Russian army retreating from Vilna is developing in a manner that may shortly result in complete success. The Russians are now reported to have lost their last railroad communication and London says their retreat "has reached a most critical juncture." The plight of the Russians is said to have resulted from an abandonment of Grand Duke Nicholas' cautious policy of retiring before being pressed too closely.

Commanders of German submarines have been given strict orders that in case of doubt as to the intentions of liners they are to take the safe course and permit the ship to escape rather than run the slightest risk of error.

The French War Office reports that having crossed the canal from the Aisne to the Marne, the army has succeeded in throwing back all German counter attacks. Along the British front the Germans increased the intensity of the artillery fire, but Sir John French reports that he countered effectively.

AS OTHERS SEE US.

To the Editor of the Central Record:

My disappointment grows keener every day that the Dixie Highway was not routed through Lancaster. Think of the ineffable ecstasy with which the traveler through "The Land Of Now" would have gazed upon our saffron cupola, seated upon a red base of brick, in which, I understand, there is to be no illuminated dial. Think of his joy on seeing old stone replaced by fine new concrete, and the freshly painted stone columns, nor can words describe his exultation on first seeing the park with its artistically mounted siege gun, its beautiful telephone post, lying the complete length of the park, its watermelon rinds and stray dogs. Surely a scene as resplendent as burst upon the enraptured vision of the "wandering peri through the opening gates of Paradise!"

Mr. Editor, please don't boast any more highways, until your citizens have more pride and artistic judgment.

Yours for the propagation of Art, for Art's sake. A Country Subscriber.

BUMPING THROG

At Democratic Campaign Opening.

With a large crowd, pleasant weather and enthusiasm at the highest tension the Democratic state campaign opened at Glasgow Monday most auspiciously and the leaders are wearing "the smile that won't come off."

The familiar expression used by Col.

Bill Thorne, "acres of people," is about the only way to express the size of the crowd, which was variously estimated at from 10,000 to 12,000.

They came in every sort of conveyance, including hundreds of autos and buggies and wagons too numerous to mention.

Hundreds more came on horseback from the eight or ten counties surrounding and contiguous to Warren county.

The grand stand at the fair grounds was well filled even before the parade arrived with the speakers and party leaders.

The main interest in the opening event was, of course, the speech of Owsley Stanley, the nominee for governor, and his address, which was delivered immediately after the crowd had been served with the burgoo and barbecued meats, was a masterpiece, many regarding it as the best effort ever made by the gifted speaker.

In his speech Mr. Stanley covered every issue confronting the people of Kentucky in this momentous campaign and his remarks were punctuated with applause as he drove home his clinching Democratic arguments.

KIPLING CALLS FIRING LINE "FRONTIER OF CIVILIZATION"

"Is Not Local Victories We're After," Frenchman Tells Noted Author at Front.

Describes Ruined Country and Sensations as the Shells Whistle By.

We present below the first of six articles from the pen of Rudyard Kipling, under the general title of "France at War on the Frontier of Civilization," describing the impressions of a visit to the fighting line in France.

By RUDYARD KIPLING.
(Copyright, 1915, by the Sun Printing and Publishing Association.)

"IT'S a pretty park," said the French artillery officer. "We've done a lot for it since the owner left. I hope he'll appreciate it when he comes back."

The car traversed a winding drive through woods between banks enclosed with little clumps of a rustic nature. At first the chalets stood their full height above ground, suggesting tea gardens in England. Farther on they sank into the earth till at the top of the ascent only their solid brown roofs showed. Torn branches drooping across the driveway, with here and there a scorched patch of undergrowth, explained the reason of their modesty.

The chateau that commanded these glories of forest and park sat boldly on a terrace. There was nothing wrong with it except, if one looked closely, a few scratches or dents on its white stone walls or a neatly drilled hole under a flight of steps. One such hole ended in an unexploded shell.

"Yes," said the officer, "they arrive here occasionally."

Something bellowed across the folds of the wooded hills. Something grunted in reply. Something passed overhead querulously, but not without dignity. Two clear, fresh barks joined the chorus, and a man moved harkly in the direction of the guns.

"Well, suppose we come and look at things a little," said the commanding officer on observation post.

There was a specimen tree, a tree worthy of such a park, the sort of tree visitors are always taken to admire. A ladder ran up to a platform. What little wind there was swayed the tall top, and the ladder creaked like a ship's gangway. A telephone bell tinkled fifty feet overhead. Two invisible guns roared for half a minute and broke like little terrors choked on a laugh. We climbed till the topmost platform swayed dizzily beneath us. Here one found a rustic shelter, midway of the tea garden pattern—a table, a map and a little window wreathed with living branches that gave one the first view of the devil and all his works.

Grass Yellow From Gas.

It was a stretch of open country with a few sticks, like old toothbrushes, which had once been trees round a farm. The rest was yellow grass, barren to all appearances as the veldt.

"The grass is yellow because they have used gas here," said an officer. "Their trenches are—you can see for yourself."

The guns in the woods began again. They seemed to have no relation to the regularly spaced bursts of smoke along a little smoky in the desert earth 2,000 yards away, no connection at all with the strong voices overhead, coming and going. It was no impudent as the drive of the sun along a breakwater. This went—a pause, a gathering of sound like the race of an incoming wave, then the high thin heads of breakers spouting white up the face of a grotto. Suddenly a seventh wave broke and spread the shape of its foam like a plume overtopping all the others.

"That's one of our torpilleurs, what you call trench sweepers," said the observer.

Among the whispering leaves some one crossed the platform to consult the map with its rings. A blistering outbreak of white smoke rose a little beyond the large plume. It was as though the tide had struck a reef out yonder. Then a new voice of tremendous volume lifted itself. Out of a lull that followed somebody laughed. Evidently the voice was known.

"That is not for us," a gunner said. "They are being waked up from"—he named a distant French position—"and so the torpilleur is attending to them. We go on with our usual work. 'Look, another torpilleur. The barbican!'

Again a big plume rose, and again the lighter shells broke at their appointed distance beyond it. The smoke died away on that stretch of trench as the foam of a swell dies in the angle of a harbor wall and broke out afresh half a mile lower down. In its apparentlessness, in its awful deliberation and its quick spasms of wrath it was more like the work of waves than of men, and our high platform's gentle sway, and glide were exactly the motion of a ship drifting with us toward that shore.

Always the Same Work."

"The usual work, only the usual work," the officer explained. "Sometimes it is here, sometimes above or below us. I have been here since May."

A little sunshine flooded the stricken landscape and made its chemical yellow look more foul. A detachment of men moved out on a road which ran cured the various fittings and the elegances, while hands stretched out of the gloom to shake, and men nodded welcome and greeting all through that cheery brotherhood in the woods and in the fields.

The voices and the wings were still busy after lunch when the car slipped past the tea houses in the drive and came into a country where women and children worked among the crops. There were large raw shell holes by the wayside or in the midst of the fields, and often a cottage or a villa had been smashed as a bonnet car is smashed by an umbrella. That must be part of Bell's work, when he bellows so treacherously among the hills to the north. We were looking for a town that lived under the shell fire. The regular road to it was reported unhealthy—not that the women and children seemed to care. We took byways of which certain exposed heights and corners were lightly blinded by windbreaks of dried trees.

"The same work, always the same work," the officer said, "and you could walk from here to the sea or to Switzerland in that ditch, and you'll find the same work going on everywhere."

"It isn't war; it's better than that," said another; "it's the cutting up of a people. They come and they fill the trenches, and they die, and they send more and these die." We do the same, of course, but look!"

He pointed to the large, delirious smoke clouds renewing themselves along the yellowed beach.

"That is the frontier of civilization. They have all civilization against them—those brutes you see. It's not the local victories of the old wars that we're after. It's the barbicans, all the barbicans. Now, you've seen the whole world."

We left that tall tree whose fruits are dead, ripened and distributed at the time of small bells. The observer returned to his maps and calculations, the telephone boy stiffened up beside his exchange. As the amateurs went out of his life some one called down through the branches to ask who was attending to Bell. Let me say, for I could not catch the gun's name. It seemed to belong to that terrible new voice which had lifted itself for the second or third time. It appeared from the reply that if Bell had mixed too long he would be dealt with from another point miles away.

The troops we came down to see were at rest in a chain of caves which had begun life as quarries and had been fitted up by the army for its own uses. There were underground corridors, antechambers, rotundas and vaulting shafts, with a bewildering play of cross lights, so that wherever you looked you saw Goya's pictures of men at arms. Every soldier has some of the old mind in him and rejoices in all the little gadgets and devices of his own invention. Death and wounding come by nature, but to lie dry, soft and keep yourself clean by forethought and contrivance is art, and in all things the Frenchman is gloriously an artist.

All Welded In One Furnace.

Moreover, the French officers seem as mothers, keen on their men, as their men are brothers, fond of them. May be the possessive form of address, "Non general, mon capitaine," helps the idea which our men cloak in other and curter phrases, and those soldiers, like ours, had been welded for months in one furnace. As an officer said: "Half our orders now need not be given. Experience makes us think together."

I believe, too, that if a French private has an idea—and they are full of ideas—it reaches his commanding officer quicker than it does with us. The sentinel bounds. The overwhelming impression was the brilliant health and vitality of these men and the quality of their breeding. They bore themselves with swing and rampant delight in life, while their voices as they talked in the side caves among the stands of arms were the controlled voices of civilization. Yet as the lights pierced the gloom they looked like bands dividing the spoil.

One picture, though far from war, stays with me. A perfectly built, dark skinned young giant had peeled himself out of his blue coat and had brought it down with a swish upon the shoulder of a half stripped comrade who was kneeling at his feet busily with some footgear. They stood against a background of semimillennial olive haze, through which glimmered a pile of coppery straw half covered by a red blanket. By a divine accident of light and pose it was St. Martin gazing his cloak to the beggar. There were scores of pictures in these galleries, notably a rock hewn chapel, where the red of the cross on the rough canvass like cloth glowed like all the others.

"Nonsense!" said an officer. "Who would be slugging here?"

We circled the cathedral again and saw what pavement stones can do against their own city when shells jerk them upward. But there was slinging, after all, on the other side of a little door in the flank of the cathedral. We looked in, doubtfully, and saw at least a hundred folk, mostly women, who knelt before the altar of an unreckoned chapel. We withdrew quietly from that holy ground, and it was not only the eyes of the French officers that filled with tears. Then there came an old thing with a prayer book in her hand, patterning across the square, evidently late for service.

"And who are these women?" I asked.

"Some are caretakers, people who have still little shops here. There is one quarter where you can buy things. There are many old people, too, who will not go away. They are of the place, you see."

"And this bombardment happens often?" I said.

"It happens always. Would you like to look at the railway station? Of course it has not been so bombarded as the cathedral."

We went through the gross nakedness of streets without people till we reached the railway station, which was very fairly knocked about, but as my friends said, nothing like as much as the cathedral. Then we had to cross the end of a long street down which the boche could see clearly. As one glanced up a street one perceived how the weeds to which men's war is the true of God, had come back and were well established the whole length of it, watched by the long perspective of open windows.

"Oh, yes," said an officer, "sheels have fallen somewhere, and," he added with fine toleration, "it is, after all, against me that the boche directs them. But come, you, and look at my dugout. It's the most superior of all possible dugouts. No, come and look at our mess. It's the Ritz of these parts," and they joyously told how they had got or pro-

TO AID OUR TRADE IN LATIN AMERICA

M'ADOO SUBMITS SUGGESTION TO PRESIDENT FOR ADOPTION.

WOULD ESTABLISH BANKS.

Asserts Reserve Institutions Are Needed in Principal Cities—Favors Government Owned Steamship Lines and Asks Funds For Another Pan-American Conference Next Year.

Secretary McAdoo has transmitted to President Wilson his report of the proceedings and conclusions of the pan-American financial conference, held here last May. He summarized his suggestions for carrying on the work of the conference and improving the financial and commercial relations between the participating nations as follows:

"First.—That the twelve federal reserve banks establish promptly joint agencies in the leading cities of all the countries of Central and South America for the purpose of providing enlarged credit facilities.

"Second.—That the government of the United States provide promptly the necessary steamship facilities by subscribing the capital stock of corporations organized for the purpose of owning and operating the necessary steamship lines.

"Third.—That the international high commission on uniformity of laws be granted an appropriation of $25,000 to enable it to carry on the important work it has undertaken and represent the United States in the meeting of the international high commission of all the Latin American republics.

"Fourth.—That a pan-American financial conference be held annually in Washington, and that congress authorizes the president to extend invitations to the republics of Latin America to attend a financial conference in Washington in 1916, and that an appropriation of $50,000 be made for this conference."

To Their Advantages and Ours.

In support of his suggestion for the establishment of joint agencies of federal reserve banks in neighboring republics, Mr. McAdoo says that extension of the credit facilities of this nation in those countries will insure to "their and our advantage."

He decried the plan advanced during the conference here for the amendment of the national bank act so that national banks could become stockholders in an independent bank which would do a foreign business, is inferior to that he now proposes for joint agencies of the reserve banks.

"The federal reserve banks," he argues, "comprise in their membership every national bank in the United States, as well as a number of leading state banks and trust companies. They constitute a financial organization of unequalled strength, and their operations in foreign countries will be for the common benefit of all banks composing the system. These agencies in foreign countries could, in addition to their banking business, render a great service to American business men and bankers by furnishing credit reports and general information about trade and finance in the various countries in which they operate."

The federal reserve act, Mr. McAdoo points out, authorizes the establishment of such agencies with the consent of the federal reserve board, and while the banks cannot be compelled to take action along these lines, encouragement by the board may prompt them to it. Entrance into this field by the federal reserve banks, Mr. McAdoo says, will not prevent member banks from carrying on and enlarging the business they are now doing in foreign countries, but the capital and resources of the reserve banks utilized for the extension and promotion of commerce "would give them unrivaled financial power."

Must Have Steamships.

"The question of adequate steamship facilities," he says, "is fundamental and underlies every other question concerning our trade and future relations with the Latin American republics. The quick and effective solution of this problem is for the government of the United States to put itself behind a shipping enterprise, so the necessary financial support to make it successful will be assured. We cannot expect private capital in this country to engage in this essential undertaking it is too big at the outset for private capital."

"Congress evidently felt," declared Mr. Smith, "that enough had been done in making surveys, compiling statistics and sending literature to the farmers and that the time had come to put into practice the things science taught."

"Last year water systems were installed in forty farm houses in one county in Michigan. This is but one of the many practical things we are doing. We find that the chief needs in the average farm home are more money (the average American farmer's income is but $1 per day), less trouble and relief from the social isolation of farm life."

ADmiral REYNOLDS RETIRES.

Reaches Age Limit After Forty-two Years of Service.

After forty-two years of active service in the navy Rear Admiral Alfred Reynolds was retired from the service the other day because of age having reached the statutory limit.

Since December, 1913, the officer has been president of the navy examining and retiring board. He was born in Virginia and entered the Naval academy in 1893, seeing much sea service in subsequent years after his graduation.

Admiral Reynolds was recognized as an authority on naval ordnance and was esteemed highly as an executive, his ability along this line winning his appointment in Washington and at naval stations in various sections of the country.

STEEL IMMUNE FROM RUST.

Berlin Claims That Krups Have Perfected a New Process.

"In closing a series of articles on Germany seen through Austrian eyes the Austrian poet, Rudolf Hans Berleb, gives a vivid description of the Krupp plant at Essen," says the Overseas News Agency.

"In it the fact is disclosed that the firm has developed a process of making steel absolutely immune against rust and even against the action of nitric acid."

Such Proof as This Should Convince Any Lancaster Citizens.

The public endorsement of a local citizen is the best proof that can be produced. None better, none stronger can be had. When a man comes forward and testifies to his fellow citizens, addresses his friends and neighbors, you may be sure he is thoroughly convinced or he would not do so. Telling one's experience when it is for the public good is an act of kindness that should be appreciated. The following statement given by a resident of Lancaster adds one more to the many cases of Home Endorsement which are being published about Doan's Kidney Pills. Read it.

W. C. Davis, tailor, Danville Pike Lancaster, says: "My kidneys were disordered and I suffered from aching pains across the middle of my back. The irregular kidney action obliged me to rise at night. I have considerable bending to do in my work and I became easily tired and languid. Doan's Kidney Pills relieved me."

James Calvin, the bright little 5-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Blankenship, fell a distance of 10 feet from the window of a silo and struck face first on the bottom of a feed chute and was rendered unconscious for some time by the jar. No bones were broken and the lad is now O. K.

brought an even $104. The other twelve lambs will be carried over and the best ewe lambs kept for breeders.

Two ewes failed to breed. Of thirteen lambs carried over from last year four were kept for breeders. The total amount of sales of live yearlings, one ewe, the thirty-two lambs and wool was $292.

Last year the first lot of lambs brought $6.52 each, but there were not so many lambs in proportion to the ewes as this year; hence the clear gain was not so much. About three tons of clover hay, three loads of ragweed hay and corn stover made up the roughage.

The concentrates were wheat bran, linseed meal and inferior corn. The lambs were given full feed of this mixture during February, March and April. I know nothing better to feed sheep than the partly moldy ears of corn. I had a prime lot of lambs. The object in view in feeding is to get the best results at least cost. There is where the clear gain comes in.

In one corner of the sheep stable in room ten feet square is boarded off, in which a constant supply of wheat bran, linseed meal and corn is kept, to which the lambs have access at will, also some choice clover hay. The lambs enter their room through an opening which is too small to let in ewe pass through.

I am frequently asked what in my opinion is the best breed to use. Any breed is good excepting the little wrinkly Merinos. Dorsets are commonly considered the best because their lambs are black and the mothers are docile and good milkers. There is more in the care and management than there is in the breed. A lot of lambs that have done well ought to average forty-five pounds or more when they are sixty days old.

EGGS FOR THE MARKET.

Produce the infertile egg. Infertile eggs are produced by hens having no male birds with them. Removing the male bird has no influence on the number of eggs laid by the hens.

The hen's greatest profit producing period is the first and second years, and unless a hen is an exceptionally good breeder she should be disposed of at the end of her second laying season and before starting to molt.

Few eggs can be expected until the pullets are matured.

If possible mark the pullets in the fall and use them in the breeding pen for the following spring.

Soft shelled eggs are often caused by fowls being confined, becoming overfat and from lack of mineral matter.

Uniform products command the best prices. Pure bred fowls produce uniform products.

Begin marketing the cockerels as soon as they weigh one and one-half pounds or attain a marketable weight.

Mark white shelled and brown shelled eggs in separate packages.

When selling eggs to the country merchant or cash buyer insist that the transaction be on a quality basis.

Sell or deliver eggs twice or three times weekly.

Small or dirty eggs should be used at home.

When taking eggs to market they should be protected from the sun's rays.

Infertile eggs will withstand marketting conditions much better than fertile eggs.

WEED OUT THE DRONES.

Trip Nest the Surest Means of Discovering Unprofitable Men.

There are entirely too many unprofitable men on the average farm, says the Farm Journal. Too many idlers are allowed to occupy the room and eat feeding belonging to the industrious ones. Weed out the drones. It is the only means of success.

Find out which are the good layers and market the rest. Twenty-five selected hens will give better results than double the number of good, bad and indifferent ones.

The most profitable fixture that can be placed in a henhouse is the trap nest. Where this is operated from Nov. 1 to June 1 the early and winter layers can be picked out, and it is that class which can be bred for profit. But it is not alone sufficient to select the good layers. You should go n step further. These hens should be mated to cockerels bred from heavy laying hens. The male has a wonderful influence on egg production.

While it is interesting to know how many eggs a pullet will lay in a year, it is more important to ascertain the number of eggs she will lay during the fall and winter, when they command the best prices. For that reason the writer does not operate his traps the entire year. He wants to breed only from cold weather layers.

Some breeders do not trap nest the hens, only the pullets. This is especially the case on large farms. They trap in order to make their selection for the coming season.

PROTECTORATE TO GOVERN HAITIANS

American Forces to Remain on Duty In Negro Republic.

ORDER MUST BE OBTAINED.

Finances to Be Governed by United States Supervision—Haitian Congress Given Time to Discuss New Treaty, Which Will Guarantee a Safe Government for Island.

The American marine and naval expeditionary force will be maintained in Haiti for an indefinite period, pending the establishment of a limited American protectorate over the finances of the republic. The terms of this far-reaching nation are set forth in a convention which has been negotiated between the United States government and that of President Dartigueave and which is now under consideration by the Haitian congress and will also have to be submitted to the United States senate in the form of a treaty for ratification. The convention provides for the following:

First.—The establishment of a Haitian receivership of customs under American control.

Second.—The establishment of a native Haitian constabulary under the command of American officers.

Third.—The establishment of American control over the finances of Haiti to the extent necessary to prevent speculation and safeguard the interests of the American people.

Fourth.—The convention is to run for a period of ten years.

In explanation of the design of the United States in thus extending a financial protection over Haiti, Secretary of State Lansing authorized this statement, in which he spoke of the Haitian arrangement as a "protectorate."

Secretary Lansing's Statement.

We have only one purpose—that is, to help the Haitian people and prevent them from being exploited by irresponsible revolutionaries. There are no property revolutions which invoke no question of principle, and they are robbing the country. While they are in progress people are starving in the streets of Port au Prince because there is no money to buy the supplies of food which abound in the country. Things have been going from bad to worse, and something must be done.

The United States government has no purpose of aggression, and is entirely disinterested in protecting this principality. We have not even asked for Mts. St. Nicholas. The arrangement, of course, would have to be considered by the United States senate for approval.

It was stated that no ultimatum had been delivered to the Haitian government setting a time within which it must accept the treaty. When the plan of the Haitian congress to adjourn was communicated to the Washington government a desire was expressed that the congress would not adjourn without action on the treaty. After this the Haitian president called congress into extra session for a month.

The congress must indicate whether it would proceed with the consideration of the treaty with a view to ratification. The American government has been insisting on prompt action and no delay, but it was denied positively that anything like an ultimatum had been delivered. Sufficient time, it was asserted, would be accorded the Haitians to consider the treaty in their congress.

Our Eye on Other Republics.

The negotiation of this treaty marks the first step in the intention of the government to adjust affairs in certain Latin-American countries involving European interests, which interests might lead to trouble between the United States and European nations after the conclusion of the European war.

It is felt in certain administration quarters that when the war is over an effort may be made by one or more of the powers now engaged in hostilities to insist that the long overdue debts of certain empires of the western hemisphere, Haiti among them, shall be liquidated without delay, and that such European governments or governments might be inclined to resort to force, with coincidental occupation, to compel obedience to the demands made.

TOKEN OF GRATITUDE.

Soldiers of France Express Appreciation of American Sympathy.

Soldiers of the French army have arranged for the establishment of a series of three scholarships for Americans, to be endowed and perpetuated as a monument of gratitude for the sympathy which Americans have shown to France during the war and as an evidence of their appreciation of the work of the Lafayette fund.

Captain de Polles wrote that all branches of the army are supporting the plan. The scholarships are in music, art and scripture and will be known as the Lafayette fund scholarships of the army.

The captain wrote that 40,000 soldiers had been helped and comforted by the kits forwarded to them by the Lafayette fund.

$200,000,000 to Men's Families.

In sentencing a soldier for fraud in connection with separation allowances, Magistrate Sir William Treloar of London remarked that he understood the nation was now paying something like $200,000,000 a year in these allowances to families of soldiers absent at the front.

Some breeders do not trap nest the hens, only the pullets. This is especially the case on large farms. They trap in order to make their selection for the coming season.

Each year in this method is used we get better returns from fewer hens. It is important. The time spent in looking after these nests is the best expenditure on the poultry farm. It is money well spent. But, as already mentioned, it is equally important to mate males in mating that came from birds that did good work.

Memories of Childhood.
In the Woman's Home Companion a contributor writes an article on country life, entitled "Alderbrook Farm." It is full of interesting facts and practical suggestions. In the course of the article the author tells the following story and comments on it:

"My father on the old Ohio farm used to have a fixed idea that we must always have green peas and new potatoes for dinner on the Fourth of July. He always worked toward that end and rarely missed it. I can well remember, too, how good those small, tender, round potatoes used to taste all cooked together with the peas in an abundance of cream.

"It is odd how much of the enjoyment of all such things comes from purely psychological associations—from the memories of youth how much of it, in short, is pure imagination—simple poetry. Many of the joys of country life are of this poetic, imaginative sort. Indeed, right here lies the point of disagreement between those honest persons who think farm life all drudgery and those who think it all so glorious. The matter of fact man or woman finds everything hard enough, but the person of imagination, who can see the poetry of life in simple things, finds large rewards in country living."
